

Japanese Co-Prosperity Sphere

U Phyu *

Abstract

Japan after World Power tried to establish contacts with first with countries in Southeast Asia saying that those countries friendly with Japan to be wealthy and to be strengthen in various ways. After that Japan aimed to play its role in creating conditions of Asians' Co-prosperity. On the basis of the Japanese motto they took trip to its neighboring countries of Asia to fill up its mission which was vital functions of Japan to maintain its position in world scenario and continued in strengthening its World Power. This study aims in seeking the Japanese functions in attempting for its Co-Prosperity and Asians co-prosperity. In preparing this research We first of all consult the works in the historiographical standpoint. In doing so We came to get the point of Japan's establishing co-prosperity was the main matter dealt with Buddhism which was expressed in Walter Kolarz in his work "The People of the Soviet Far East. So we went through Asoka's mission for Buddhism which became the major religion in India in his time. After getting idea we arranged and starting writing this paper. The hypothesis of this research is that the Japanese attempt in the way of creating scope merely for Buddhism was not successful as many as they intended because of discrimination of other isms. The findings of this studies are Japan made great attempts for Japan which to be sustainable its Power but it was an attempt including all stratum which to be in a same platform. Therefore the Japanese though vision was for Asian Co-Prosperity its mission sided on the way relating to singularity.

Key Words: Japanese, functions, Asia

---

* Professor and Head, Dr., Department of History, Yangon University of Education